Cop trial: hung jury

Jurors cannot agree on charges of racism

By FRANCES THOMAS

ALBANY — A five-year-old $1 million lawsuit by a former police officer charging the Albany police department with racial discrimination has ended in a mistrial after jurors said they could not reach a verdict.

After a 35-day trial and three days of deliberations in Alameda County Superior Court, the jurors said Wednesday that they could not decide if Harold Evans, the only black ever employed by the department, was harassed and illegally fired because of his race.

At the request of Robert M. Kissel, Evans' lawyer, Judge Marie Collins set Oct. 17 as the date for a new trial. The City of Albany, Police Chief James Simmons, Capt. Melvin Boyd and Sgt. Arthur Clemmons are the defendants in the suit.

Kissel said that a poll of the jury, which included four blacks, showed that seven of the 12 jurors voted to find the city guilty of racial discrimination. But a civil suit, such as Evans', requires that at least nine of the 12 jurors agree.

On the question of whether Simmons knowingly allowed Evans to be discriminated against, the final jury poll was seven to five against Simmons, Kissel said.

Despite the fact that a majority of jurors appeared convinced by Evans' claims, Robert J. Zweben, the city attorney, said the jury deadlock suggested that Evans' case is weak.

"I can't say much about the decision," Zweben said. "But the fact is the jury was not able to conclude there was discrimination."

Zweben said at the new trial the city's attorneys would concentrate on presenting more details about the events, some of which are more than eight years old.

Supes hit panic button over future phone bills

By DON McCORMACK

CONTRA COSTA supervisors called a public hearing Tuesday to warn that phone bills for many residents will probably double or triple next year.

Pay phone calls will increase from a dime to a quarter, said Willard Wehe, chief of the telecommunications division of the county Public Works Department.

The basic charge for residential service, now $7 a month, is expected to rise to $18.30 by next July, he added.

In a gloomy tone, he worried that divestiture — the reason for the rate increases — "could upset the best telephone system in the world."

Supervisor Sunne McPeak of Pleasant Hill, who proposed the hearing, said that when the increases came, customers would revolt.

But aside from political aides, phone company representatives and county bureaucrats, only one person showed up, Alistair McMabney of Walnut Creek. He joked that when bills went up, the telephone people, to avoid criticism, would take off for Tahiti. Undaunted by the turnout, supervisors told their staff to report back Sept. 20 on new developments.

"We would like to get feedback from the public," said McPeak, "whether they would like public agencies to take action or let the marketplace work out the rates."

Under pressure from the courts, American Telephone and telegraph is breaking up its battered monopoly of phone services in the United States. Private companies, such as Sprint and M.C.I., in recent years have been offering cheaper long-distance rates than the Bell system.

Wehe said that the Bell system used profits from out-of-state calls to finance losses on local services. In many instances these subsidies made up over 60 percent of local costs, said Earl Forshee of AT&T.

With breakup, Pacific Telephone and many of the regional branches of AT&T are being formed into independent companies. These companies will now have to make a profit without the long-distance subsidy, Wehe said.

Pacific Telephone — soon to be called the Pacific Telesis Group — has asked the state Public Utility Commission to authorize a $1.2 billion rate increase next year.

Charles McEvoy, a general manager of Pacific Telephone, said the increases will fall hardest on those customers who rarely call out-of-state, and possibly benefit those who make many calls to other states.

He said the bill for the average customer now runs $39 a month. This would rise to about $49, McEvoy said.

Lifeline rates — for poor people who rarely phone — would rise from a base of $2.50 to $3.75.

"I don't like what I hear," said Supervisor Tom Powers of Richmond. "But I don't know what I can do at this time."

Colusa building will rise

By FRANCES THOMAS

KENSINGTON — Developer Edward Hammonds said the lawsuit filed to stop his Colusa project would cost him time and money, but that he would prevail in his plans to build the $2.5 million mall and office complex.

The Colusa-Arlington Neighborhood Association, which filed the suit, also has threatened to ask for court injunction if the developer attempts to break ground.

But Hammonds said he would not begin construction under the threat of litigation. He said the lawsuit could force him to delay the start of construction until next June rather than July 1984.

"Overall I am still convinced a majority of the community is in favor of the project, and the opposition has misjudged over time," Hammonds said. "I think I will prevail."

The Contra Costa Board of Supervisors approved Hammonds' project July 20 over the strong objections of the neighborhood association for its name known as the Citizens for the Betterment of Kensington.

The association filed the lawsuit Aug. 9 against Hammonds and the Contra Costa County Board of Supervisors. The lawsuit seeks to have a superior court judge overturn the county supervisors decision. The lawsuit also asked that an environmental impact report be commissioned.

Developer expects to win lawsuit

Such a report could delay the project for another six months and cost Hammonds about $10,000, he said.

Although Hammonds would not say how much he would spend to fight the lawsuit, he said the association's belief that the legal battle would cost them $10,000 was low. The association is relying on its members' donations to raise the money.

"It's going to cost a lot more than $10,000 or $20,000 for both of us," he said. "Regardless of what the court decision is, there is no winner in litigation."

While both Hammonds and the neighborhood group have said they want to negotiate, the two sides have made no progress at the bargaining table.

"There is no way of resolving the controversy until they are willing to put the controversy in concrete detail and say specifically what modifications are necessary," Hammonds said of his opponents. "It makes it difficult to negotiate."

But Oliver Miller, the secretary of the neighborhood association, said Hammonds was unwilling to listen to the group's concerns about parking problems and traffic congestion.

Teenager arrested in child sex case

By JOHN ADAMS

EL CERRITO — A former El Cerrito High School student faced arraignment on charges molesting two 7-year-old neighborhood girls in his grandparents' home and is suspected by police of being involved in at least one other case.

Todd L. Sturz, 18, of 645 Elm St., was arrested Wednesday after he was questioned by Detective Dan Bell at the El Cerrito police station.

Sturz, alias Todd Johnson, became a suspect in the cases of the two girls when one of the children told her mother a man had "hurt her," Bell said.

and talked to the police, and officers then questioned the other 7-year-old girl and discovered much the same story.

According to Bell, Sturz molested the girls several times at the Elm Street home where he lived with his grandparents.

The grandparents often babysat for the girls, Bell said, and were home when the incidents allegedly occurred. Bell said, however, that the couple knew nothing of their grandson's alleged activities.

Bell said Sturz is suspected of approaching other children over the last year and the case is under continued investigation.

Sturz has no previous criminal sex record, Bell said.

Meter maid gets an unusual present

If Albany meter maid Nancy Ramos had any qualms about releasing her age, they have been rendered moot by some early-morning shenanigans of her co-workers at the police department.

Everyone who passed by Albany Police Department headquarters Tuesday morning found out that Nancy Ramos just turned 50.

A group of Ramos' co-workers surprised the seven-year veteran of the meter maid corps by draping a 10-foot long happy birthday sign across the front of the police department building at 1000 San Pablo Ave.

In three-foot high, blue, green, red and yellow letters, the sign announced that "Nancy Ramos is 50 and still really nifty."

"It's okay to print her age," said police dispatcher Karen Alvarez. "We just advertised it to the world anyway."

Odom gets 18 years for rapes

AN OAKLAND man who kidnapped three women, raped two and forced one to rob an Albany bank has been sentenced to 18 years and 8 months in state prison.

Superior Court Judge Joseph Karesch imposed the term on Christopher Odom, 27, convicted of 13 felonies, including rape, kidnapping, robbery and oral copulation.

Odom snatched the women off Oakland street corners Feb. 23 and 24, according to police.

On the first night, he offered rides to two sisters who were waiting for a bus. After they got into the car, Odom produced a gun and forced one of the women out.

He took the other into the Oakland hills, where he sexually attacked her.

The next night, Odom picked up an Oakland prostitute and took her to a Berkeley motel room. Odom repeatedly raped the woman, police said.

He then drove to a Bank of America branch on Solano Avenue and ordered the prostitute into the bank.

She showed a teller the robbery note Odom had written, but the woman pleaded with the teller to push the alarm button. After some confusing minutes, bank officials alerted Albany police, who captured (Continued on Page 2)

Kirby seeks EC Council seat

By JIM GRODNIK

EL CERRITO — Steve G. Kirby wants the City Council seat left vacant by the resignation of Richard Spellman.

Kirby, 33 and an El Cerrito native, last year taught fifth and sixth grades at El Monte Elementary School and will teach at Castro Elementary School in the fall. He said he would have waited another two years to run for the Council had it not been for Spellman's resignation.

"I never wanted to run against an incumbent — I wouldn't want to compete with the Council members," he said. "Now I don't have to, it's good timing."

Kirby, who graduated from El Cerrito High School in 1968 and later graduated from UC-Berkeley, said he is not running out of dissatisfaction with the current Council, although he said, "The feeling in the community on Chuck E. Cheese was that the Council wasn't listening."

He said the most important issues facing El Cerrito are a need for senior housing, improvements in El Cerrito Plaza and recycling. "The Plaza has been losing out to Hilltop Mall and needs to be upgraded," he said.

According to Kirby, the city needs recycling that is less expensive. "The easiest thing to do would be to give it up, but that's not the way I see it." He said the city has an environmental responsibility to continue its recycling facility.

This is Kirby's first bid for elected office. Currently he is president of the Parks and Recreation Commission in El Cerrito, and is a delegate from the Richmond School District to the National Education Association. He is also a commissioner and immediate past president of the Richmond Sister City Commission.

Kirby said, "People sit grumbling at council meetings. Maybe they're intimidated by standing up to speak."

He said that he intends to provide an "accessible ear" to the community. "People could call me as a last resort," he said, "I'll stop and listen."

Kirby said he is in the race to win: "I'm very confident. I've met and known enough people through the years. A lot will be done for me by word of mouth."

Kirby is running for the unexpired two-year term left by Spellman's resignation. Greg Howe, Norman La Force and Charles R. Lewis IV had all taken out applications for the office. None, however, had returned the papers and filed them with the city clerk.

Also on the ballot in the Nov. 8 election will be a contest for the two four-year terms currently held by James E. Allen, Jr. and Margaret Collins. Allen, Robert C. Bacon, and Lewis have taken out applications for that office, but none has yet filed.

The other two seats on the five-member council, held by Mayor Jean Siri and Howard Abelson, do not expire until 1985.

Scramble for 2-year seat

By GORDON RADDUE

EL CERRITO — In a surprising turn of events, Councilwoman Margaret Collins announced this week that she will seek re-election to the City Council Nov. 8, but not as an incumbent.

Instead, she said, she will take out nomination papers for the special election to fill the two-year vacancy created by Councilman Richard Spellman's recent resignation.

Collins said her decision was consistent with her action last year in opposing consolidation of the scheduled 1982 municipal election with the 1983 district voting.

The council's 3-2 approval of consolidation automatically extended each member's term of office by 19 months. Collins' and James Allen Jr.'s to November of this year and those of Spellman, Mayor Jean Siri and Howard Abelson to November 1985.

Abelson and Collins voted against the extension. "I still feel the citizens were robbed of an opportunity to vote in April of last year," Collins said. "The two-year term would give me eight years in office, which I was elected to serve in the first place."

There had been some speculation that Collins might not run at all, stemming from her recent statement that she would be devoting a great deal of her time next year to fund-raising activities in behalf of the Open House senior center.

Collins said she intends to follow through with her commitment to the senior center.

"I'll have plenty of time to do that and serve on the council, too," she said.

She said senior housing and commercial development will be major issues in her campaign.

Her decision not to run as an incumbent means that other candidates will have until Sept. 6 to file for her four-year seat. It also leaves Allen the lone incumbent seeking a four-year term, his only opponents being Chamber of Commerce president Bob Bacon, vice chairman of the Planning Commission, and Chuck Lewis, who has taken out nomination papers for both the four-year and two-year seats.

Collins' decision makes it a virtual certainty that Lewis will file for a four-year seat. She is an outstanding vote-getter, and four others — Parks and Recreation Commission chairman Steve Kirby, attorney Norman LaForce, local businessman Gregg Howe and Jaye Ethel Erickson — also have taken out papers for the two-year seat.

Bacon was the only non-incumbent who had declared himself a candidate for the April 1982 election at the time it was consolidated with this year's district voting.

He was critical of the consolidation, saying "It is not the proper time in El Cerrito to deny the voters their right to replace any member of the council."

He is a member and past president of the El Cerrito Plaza Merchants Association and the Albany-El Cerrito Exchange Club. He has served as chairman of the Neighborhood Preservation Committee and the El Cerrito Redevelopment Advisory Committee.

He is also on the San Francisco Gift Show Advisory Committee and is a member of the El Cerrito Historical Society.

Bacon feels the present council has been weak in the areas of senior housing and El Cerrito Plaza development. He said he intends to make commercial development a major part of his platform.

"I don't want to see the Plaza overdeveloped," he said. "I want to see it improved but not grow beyond a small-town atmosphere and the personalized service that only locally-owned shops can offer."

Bacon was a leader in the successful fight to keep a Chuck E. Cheese Pizza Time Theatre from replacing the Kirby's Restaurant complex at the Plaza.

TRIAL

until 1978, when he was fired by Simmons. Evans, a diabetic, alleged that he was illegally fired. Simmons said Evans was fired for failing to provide medical proof of his fitness for the job.

The suit also claimed that Evans was the victim of relentless racial harassment and insults. During the trial, derogatory notes sent to Evans by other officers were offered as evidence. These notes called Evans names such as "liver lips" and "bug-eyed jungle strutter."

John Carey, a lawyer hired by the city, has said Evans used "racism as a coverup for (his) own incompetence."

During the trial Carey said that Evans had a record of unprofessional conduct, including a suspension without pay for tardiness and a failure to search a suspect properly. While in custody the suspect cut himself with a knife Evans had failed to confiscate.

During the trial Evans said he was punished too harshly for these mistakes.

Evans, 42, now lives in Phoenix, Arizona and works as a security guard for the Arizona Department of Corrections.

Kissel, who said Evans lost his career as a result of his dismissal, asked for $500,000 in general damages caused by stress and $500,000 to compensate him for medical bills, legal fees and his potential earnings as a police officer.

Zweben said so far the suit has cost about $100,000, of which, under the city's insurance policy, the city has paid $50,000.

The public works project supplied the paint, and Mizutani, who will receive credit toward becoming an Eagle Scout for the project, rounded up the labor. Council nixes Bible Week

Let's stick to local issues, members say

By FRANCES THOMAS

ALBANY — An attempt to declare a week in November Bible Week has failed to gain the support of the Albany City Council, and one council member called the proposal "a violation of the constitutional separation of church and state."

Council member J. Henry Kruse asked that the proclamation, which appeared as a routine item on the Monday Council consent calendar, be taken off the calendar and discussed by the council. The council later voted unanimously (Mayor Ruth J. Ganong was absent) to reject the proclamation.

The proclamation was sent to the Council by the Laymen's National Bible Committee. In a form letter to the council, the committee asked that Nov. 20-27 be declared Bible Week, the slogan of which is "A message you can't ignore."

The proclamation said in part "most religious Americans find in the Holy Bible guidance for a personal, meaningful faith to sustain them in all times."

Kruse said he opposed the proclamation because it conflicted with the U.S. Constitution and because it had bad precedent.

"It was not proposed by anybody in Albany. I think it is not appropriate precedent that anyone, no how big or small, can send something in and it be automatically approved," Kruse said.

He said later that if the council agreed to even for a proclamation, he was afraid that the president Procter and Gamble Co. might ask the city to declare Soap Week.

Council member Robert E. Nichols agreed.

"I'd feel uncomfortable if next week we had a National Buddhist Week or National Korean Week," Nichols said.

color of the paint and removed one floor of shops in one section," Miller said.

Miller said the association was not opposed to "revitalizing the area," which surrounds Narsai's Restaurant, but that any project should be "sensible, low-key and primarily serve the neighborhood." Hammonds has proposed a 120-seat restaurant which residents fear with attract customers from all the region.

But Hammonds says the project also will include locally oriented businesses such as a shoe shop, laundry, produce store and fish market.

Hammonds said his lawyer will answer the lawsuit within the next month. Both sides said they hoped to have a court hearing before the end of the year.

Church sets Bible class

Temple Baptist Church will hold a "Faith Summer Club" in conjunction with Faith Missionary Outreach.

Boys and girls in kindergarten-seventh grades are invited to this vacation Bible school follow-up week to be held from 10-11 a.m. Aug. 29-Sept. 2.

There will be Bible teaching, singing and refreshments. For further information, contact the church office, 525-9103.

Coffee shop loses its soul

Leanna 'Toby' Poe misses the coffee shop, but is looking forward to retirement

By CATHERINE SCHUTZ

EL CERRITO — Leanna "Toby" Poe and her friends missed each other so much they got together for breakfast here last week. They had a great time, but it wasn't quite the same. They all used to meet over the counter of the popular soul food coffee shop in the El Cerrito Co-op, where Poe presided as cook and companion to numerous loyal customers until the shop was quietly closed July 22.

"After almost 14 years here it kind of seems like home," Poe said. Although she's sorry to leave the coffee shop, she's looking forward to retirement, which will be spent in the Northern California hamlet of Dunsmuir where she and her husband, Earl, have built a house.

Citing the coffee shop's unprofitable operation, Co-op management recommended last year that the building, tucked into the northeast corner of the building, be closed. But Poe's loyal followers protested, and won the shop a reprieve.

Co-op promised to try to find ways to make the El Cerrito shop, and those in the three Berkeley Co-ops, make money. General Manager Roy Bryant says only the Walnut Creek store's coffee shop is profitable.

The management had calculated the El Cerrito coffee shop would have to make $1,353 a week to cover its costs, but it was only making about $500 a week, according to Bryant.

"That didn't even pay for labor and supplies," he says. "It's necessary to close it. We've been looking at any of the operations that have lost money."

Poe is sorry the coffee shop had to close, "but after all things do have to change. But my customers were really upset."

The Co-op management offered her jobs at the Berkeley facilities, but she turned them down.

"I was going to retire at the end of the year anyway," she says, adding that she thought about retiring early while she was on vacation in July.

When she returned, she submitted her formal retirement letter to the Co-op.

"The timing of this decision (to close the coffee shop) presented me with an excellent opportunity to consider personal retirement goals," she wrote. "My retirement marks the beginning of new opportunities for my husband and me. We are truly looking forward to an active and productive life within a country setting."

She plans to spend her retirement fishing and generally taking it easy, but she also expects to return to this area for frequent visits "because I get homesick for my friends here."

Bryant says work will start in two or three weeks to remodel the El Cerrito coffee shop area to accommodate a natural food and gourmet center. In the Berkeley Co-ops, the coffee shops are being converted into delicatessens.

Churches

A man of cloth and class

By JIM GRODNIK

EL CERRITO — Helon Chichester stands astride two worlds. He is the priest at St. Patrick's Episcopal Church in El Cerrito as well as a full-time professor at the College of Alameda.

For Chichester, 53, it's the best of all possible worlds.

Teaching is his full-time job and main source of income. As a college professor he has taught 60 different courses, ranging from American history and chemistry to sex and drugs.

At St. Patrick's, where he has served since June, he is on an approximately nine-month assignment and draws a salary of $120 a week. This gives him a freedom he relishes.

Chichester discussed his dual occupations in the living room of his home in the hills behind the Claremont Hotel. Colored banners waved in the wind in front of the house.

Chichester, who has been called "Budge" since his childhood in Macon, Ga., wore khaki pants, moccasins and a Mickey Mouse wristwatch. He speaks in a carefully modulated drawl.

"I like the independence and freedom outside the church," he said, adding, "I can say what I want in the church without fear of financial retribution."

In an autobiography written for the National Association for the Self-Supporting Active Ministry (NASSAM), Chichester wrote of financially independent ministers: "I think that most of us have our heads on a little more securely and those same heads are filled with a more viable substance than the gray oatmeal of most clerics."

Chichester is vice-president, and will soon be president of NASSAM, an organization of bishops, priests, deacons and laymen who earn most of their income outside the church.

This is a growing trend. NASSAM priests temporarily serve congregations that are between priests, or are in economic difficulty. Chichester said that of the 100 Episcopal congregations in the five Bay Area counties, at any given time, five are strapped for funds.

Before coming to the College of Alameda 12 years ago, Chichester taught at San Francisco State University, where he wore his clerical clothes — "my rector set" — once a semester.

He found that students with traditional religious backgrounds were slightly in awe of him. "The secular Californians probably thought it was a freaky outfit," he said.

Chichester earned his Ph.D. at UC-Berkeley in the 60's, and recalls, "Some days I had to come home early to let my children in from the tear gas in the street."

He said he identified strongly with the students. "The university was not sensitive to the needs of the students. Some of the brightest people in the world were trashing Telegraph Avenue out of rage and frustration."

His teaching career also included a stint in adult education at a Beverly Hills church where he gave communion to Raymond Massey, Fred Astaire and Randolph Scott.

He has been the priest at St. Anne's in Fremont, ("pick up trucks and Cadillacs in the parking lot, and guns in both of them"), as well as at St. John's-Montclair in Oakland ("a white wine and quiche lorraine congregation. My son counted 17 blue blazers in the congregation one Sunday").

Since June, Chichester has been the interim priest at St. Patrick's, replacing Father Charles P. Dickey. Chichester said St. Patrick's is "a piece of cake, a beautiful church."

from all over the East Bay. According to Chichester, the church has a higher percentage of women than most churches.

"The women are quite conscious of the attitudes and rhetoric of feminism," he said. "I find that exciting. The congregation has a high level of trust and communication, and a rich feminist vein. Around the house I call it St. Patricia's."

Betty Tucker, who has belonged to St. Patrick's for 20 years, said that it was difficult for Chichester to succeed Dickey, who had been the priest at St. Patrick's for 18 years, and was well-liked.

She said, "After the second or third Sunday, he told the congregation, 'I fully expect to be invited to your homes for fried chicken dinner. I've been here two weeks and haven't had an invitation yet.'"

According to Tucker, he invited the left side of the church to one dinner at his home, and the right side to dinner another night. That broke the ice.

Tucker, who is a lay participant in the Episcopal services, said of Chichester, "He lives in the 20th century. His message is not something out of a book from 2,000 years ago, but now."

Chichester sees his roles as priest and professor as similar. He said that both require enthusiasm and a respect for life. Both require counseling, organization and administration.

"Whatever you teach, if you do it with a certain amount of excitement, they can go on to be better students, he said."

The colored pennants that wave in front of the Chichester house were strung up to greet his daughter, Paula, when she returned from India at age 30 married to a former Buddhist monk. Chichester's wife, Cherie Poe, is training to be a psychotherapist. A mandala house of meditation is under construction in the backyard.

That's the environment of this pharmacist's son, a self-described "plain vanilla WASP from Georgia."

Memoirs of a demonstrator

By PATTY MCCREDIE

decided last year, as I watched TV and newspaper reports, that I would be at Livermore protesting this year. I didn't know it then. I championed the cause; my co-workers laughed at me.

My true love was at Livermore last year, as a supporter. At the time he happened to be on leave from LBL, the nuclear laboratory — but make no mistake; they are related by affection.

My True Love has been shopping for his niche in a way of what he calls the "Tower of Babel." It is this which believes threatens us all with extinction. It must be true if we spoke the same language, could we still so hate each other?

I was thus inspired to join others in our outspoken demonstration. As I slept by night in my cot, and stood in line for meals, I thought to myself, this is not jail (I was told the food was better in the real jail). You see, I was getting to get my feet wet. I wanted to register my strong approval, and overcome my fear of the consequences. I never been vocal before, I wanted to know what penalty was for objecting.

I got my chance — in the real jail. It was an ugly place. The shower was like a tomb, no windows. Some deputies were sympathetic; some were crude. It was the first time I ever strip-searched. But now I know what's in store for next time. A temporary indignity.

I learned some new lessons. I found out that there's a girl scout in every grown woman. I learned, also, that we're all related... I saw the faces of my friends, and then them my sisters.

My former co-workers call me the 'Con.' I was afraid to tell my family what I had done. When I did tell them, they were proud of me. I hope my experience might suggest them, something very worth doing. This is my hope.

I wonder how to proceed with my life. I plan to continue my insubordination. Meanwhile, though, I have to wonder to myself about looking for a job. Do I tell my prospective employer that I may drop out suddenly to do more jail time? What kind of job can I get that will have allowances for sudden, indeterminate absences?

I salute my co-demonstrators. You sacrificed more than I did. What a temptation you must have resisted, each time the sheriff came with his bullhorn.

It seemed important to stick together in the face of so much intention to scatter us. It certainly paid off...for us...for next year's demonstrators...and many other people we don't even know...

The people who care about me are especially anxious to know, "why this? why do you have to do it this way? Isn't there a better way?" All I can say is that I know of no more potent gesture; I do not know of any stronger thing that I personally can do; and I want to swell the ranks of the people so adamant, and so determined, that they are willing to go to jail to awaken other people to this peril.

It's not easy to answer questions, even when I ask them of myself. The best reason — the best reason I can give for my involvement of this specific kind — is that I want to add to the numbers of people willing to go to jail over this issue.

I want to volunteer to become a small part of this movement; I want to be a cell in this organic force, this body of opposition to hate, waste and destruction.

I try to pay attention to politics, though it pleases me not. This matter of our survival exceeds in scale and importance anything I've ever been concerned about. I'm not erudite enough to adequately express my feelings about it, not because I'm inarticulate. It demands more skill than I have, and the best I can do is to join the others, and support the truth when I think I see it. We mustn't let those with power forget about us — we've got to guarantee that they can't forget about this.

And they say, after all, that we're the ones with the power. Do you think that it's true?

The drunk-driver crusade

Marjorie Poe of El Cerrito has gotten MADD about drunk drivers

By DON McCORMACK

EL CERRITO — One day last year, Marjorie Poe picked up a magazine in the living room of her home and came across an article about a woman who had formed a group to fight drunk drivers.

Poe, 37, has two teen-age sons and knew that many young people are injured or killed in auto accidents. She read on.

"The article mentioned something about the woman being fiercely proud of her Lebanese heritage," Poe said. "My God, I realized, it's Candy."

About 17 years ago, when Poe lived in Fairfield, she struck up a friendship with her neighbor, Candy Lightner.

"She had these beautiful, red-haired gorgeous girls, twins," Poe recalled.

When the Lightners went out, Poe occasionally took care of the girls. The Poes later moved and the families lost contact.

On May 3, 1980, Cari Lightner, 13, one of the twins, was struck down and killed while walking to a school carnival. The driver was drunk. He did not stop. It turned out that the man was two days out of jail from a another hit-and-run drunk driving crash. This was his fifth drunk driving offense and he still had a California driver's license.

Poe remembered Candy Lightner as an "intelligent person whose heart was in the right place but she was not a political person."

Lightner became political. She formed Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, which now has 166 chapters in 38 states. The story of Cari's death and her mother's campaign was made into a television movie, attracting wide attention to the cause.

A Contra Costa chapter is now forming. Delores McKee of Pittsburg has been elected president; Poe, a vice president.

Recently the group met in Concord and heard speeches by District Attorney William O'Malley and other law enforcement officials. The parents of children or young people killed or injured by drunk drivers also spoke. Other meetings are planned.

After reading the article, Poe called Candy Lightner and then threw her energy into MADD. Poe had worked with Martin Luther King Jr. when he was signing up voters in Georgia. She enjoys politics.

But, she emphasized, she did not organize the Contra Costa chapter of MADD. That honor goes mainly to McKee, who was prompted in part by the death of a daughter of a close friend, who was killed in a crash with a drunk driver.

"What did he (the driver) get? A few weeks in County Jail," McKee recently told a reporter. "Many deterrents."

What kind of deterrents?

Poe said MADD intends to monitor local news press for tougher punishment for drunk drivers, to remediate programs for repeat offenders, to educate people to the dangers of drinking and driving, to victims of drunk drivers and their families.

"We are not concerned about revenge and punishment for the sake of punishment," she said. "Our goal is to reduce deaths and injuries."

A key element in the campaign is to turn public opinion against drinking and driving and to convince them to risk a lot when they drink and get behind the wheel.

"I have a friend, a serious drinker," Poe said. "One evening he called me and asked me to feed his dog at a party, was drinking, and did not want to drive. He was spending the night at a hotel."

She said this was the kind of thinking MADD tries to encourage — even when the drinker has seemed enough to be considered legally drunk.

"I have hypoglycemia. Alcohol affects me real lot of people are like that."

Poe also favors mandatory restraints in cars — mainly because of teen-agers.

"It's pretty hard to get macho young men and women popping out all over to put on seat belts," Poe said.

As for teen-agers and drinking, Poe advised parents to plan that if a teen-ager drinks, he or she be encouraged to call home for a ride.

"Don't ask any questions when they call. Let them up," Poe said.

Poe can cite a multitude of horrifying statistics on drunk drivers, before laws were tightened in 1982, killed 26,000 people a year, she said. Of the 36 fatal vehicular deaths in Contra Costa last year, 27 involved alcohol, she said.

Poe had one encouraging statistic. Since California stiffened its drunk driving penalties in January, thanks in part to pressure from MADD — fatalities by drunk drivers have dropped 15 percent, she said.

For more information about MADD, call 433-4333, write P.O. Box 473, Antioch, 94509.

Ice Cream Social offers some exotic scoops

Berkeley area ice-cream makers who stand ready to compare the quality of their products with anyone's will have a chance next month to stack up their scoops against other Bay Area companies.

San Francisco public television station KQED is holding its second annual Old-Fashioned Ice Cream Social and Tasting Sunday, Sept. 18, from 1 to 5 p.m. at the San Francisco Trade Show Center. The event, which carries a $10 admission fee for adults and $7 for children, is a benefit for KQED. Last year's event was a sellout.

Local standard-bearers include Botts Ice Cream, McCallum's Ice Cream, Ortman's Ice Cream, and Vivoli's Ice Cream of Italy. Alameda's entry comes from Tucker's Super Creamed Ice Cream. Oakland entrants include Dreyer's Grand Ice Cream, Fenton's Creamery, Figaro Gelato, Lucerne Ice Cream, and Mary B. Best Extravagant Ice Cream.

Promised are such exotica as Kahlua Fudge, Sin, Afrikan Guava, Grand Marnier, Popeye's (that's right, spinach ice cream), and other kinds of nut, liqueur, flower and vegetable flavors.

Some of the local flavorists have submitted some of what they do. Oakland-based Dreyer's, which is featuring its special Rum Custard flavor, claims to have created Rocky Road, Toasted Almond and Candy Figaro Gelato's four principals, three attorneys and an administrator, describe their gelato as high-tech, modern, art deco and even punk.

Mary B. Best, which creates custom flavors for customers, is responsible among other things for Figaro's Peter Pumpkin, Bacchanal and Champagne Maxima. It will also create shapes such as George Washington shoes, pheasants, battleships and tennis rackets.

Vivoli's, a fast-growing all-women's outfit, is distributed throughout the state.

Players with more experience can choose the Traveling League. These teams usually practice twice a week and play a Saturday game against East Bay clubs. Both House and Traveling Leagues begin play in September.

There is space in every age group for boys and girls. Parents are encouraged to join the House League teams, and a number of spaces are available on the Traveling League teams.

Telephone Pioneers continue a lifetime of service

After Ma Bell, there's time to help others

By BETH MENDE

Mary Brooks took off her telephone headset and picked up a sewing needle.

Brooks, an Albany resident, belongs to the Telephone Pioneers of America, an organization of retired telephone company workers, which devotes hours of service each month to older persons and the disabled.

Keeping in touch over the years was the initial goal of the group, which was founded in 1911 by several of the pioneers in telephone communications, including Ma Bell.

As its membership grew, however, so did its sense of purpose. Today, Brooks is one of 500,000 Pioneers in the United States and Canada.

Out of 60,000 living in California, approximately 1,000 belong to the East Bay Council of Telephone Pioneers, which serves Albany, El Cerrito, Kensington and the surrounding cities.

Brooks, now 75, began working for the phone company in 1924, at age 15. She joined the Pioneers in 1946. "I need not wait until retirement to join as long as I have had 18 years of work experience with the phone company."

Once a month, Brooks — who retired from the Revenue Division 13 years ago — joins 10-25 other members to make and knit feeding bibs, drawstring bags and lap robes. The handicrafts are then donated to convalescent homes throughout the East Bay, including the Albany Rest Home and the Carlson Convalescent Hospital in El Cerrito.

Gloria Moore, activity director for the Carlson Convalescent Home, said that the Pioneers' work is greatly appreciated by the home's staff and patients.

In addition to the handicrafts, Moore said, the group is making trays for Valentine's Day, Easter and other holidays. The Pioneers have also brought in Christmas gifts for everyone of the home's 45 residents for the past eight years.

"The patients really enjoy it, really look forward to it," Moore said.

The East Bay Council participates in a wide variety of projects which use the electrical, engineering and organizational skills of its members, according to Ben Trapin, the group's publicity director.

Trapin, 75, uses his 40-plus years of installation experience to repair talking book machines and tape recorders. Both serve as vital source of information and learning for the disabled.

A Berkeley resident, Trapin donates 8-10 hours each week to repairing these machines for the Orientation Center for the Blind in Albany and the Kensington School for the Handicapped. He works in Berkeley in a room donated for the Pioneers' use in the State Department of Rehabilitation office on University Avenue.

In this room filled with boxes of tools, parts, talking book machines and tape recorders, Trapin also wires stuffed animals for two-way conversations. The animals — donated by members — are used by speech therapists to encourage autistic and speech-impaired children to speak.

"We've found that children, especially medically or speech handicapped (children), will respond to the animal better than they would to a human being," Trapin said. "A teacher's just another person to them, but when they see an animal that's talking to them, they perk up."

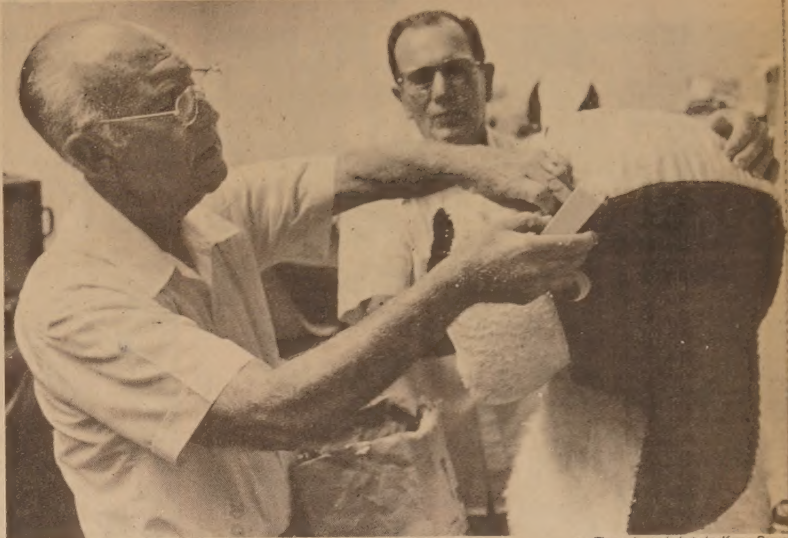

Everett Graham, 62, assists Trapin approximately five hours a week.

Graham, a Berkeley resident who worked for Standard Oil before retiring, is considered a "Pioneer Partner" because he is married to a lifetime member. His wife, Jeannette, is this year's East Bay Council president and a 28-year veteran of the phone company.

The Pioneers have donated talking animals to the Center for Children's Communication Disorders at Children's Hospital in Oakland, Everett Graham said. Through their use, speech therapists have succeeded in encouraging a child who had not spoken for a year to speak.

The talking animals and talking book machines are only two of the items exhibited and available for ordering at the yearly Pioneer Fair in Oakland, Trapin said. All equipment, he said, is donated to organizations and individuals in need.

Also exhibited is the "beep baseball," a softball which beeps its whereabouts and makes it possible for visually handicapped persons to participate in sports. The ball was developed by the Telephone Pioneers of America and is exhibited at the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York.

In addition to these projects, Trapin said the Pioneers gather clothing and old eyeglasses for the needy, perform infant hearing assessment tests at East Bay hospitals on equipment developed by the group, and recondition old Teletype machines for use by the hard of hearing.

In keeping with the group's original goal, Trapin said, the Pioneers devote much of their time to keeping in touch and looking out for each other. Via the "Ready Hands" program, Trapin and Graham will visit members' homes to fix leaky faucets, broken doorbells and cars. Other members make social calls, help with shopping or assist with income tax preparation.

The Emergency Lifeline Program, itself a part of Merritt Hospital's emergency response system, is perhaps the most important service the group offers its members.

Former telephone installers such as Bob Caldwell of Albany install units for shut-ins or handicapped Pioneers. These units are connected to a control unit in the hospital. In an emergency, a member simply presses a button and help is immediately dispatched.

"Service to self and to others," Trapin said, is the group's motto. It is also the motto which keeps him as well as his former co-workers working long after they have officially retired.

"It's what keeps me young," Trapin said.

Arts

Causes presents a good show

By GORDON RADDUE

ALBANY — Nina Causey captivated a jam-packed audience on last Sunday at the Viking Lounge in Albany Square with a skillfully programmed performance that fulfilled her promise to provide "something for everybody."

A gifted singer-pianist with poise and wit to match, her show was an outright success for her and her peers, the Richmond-based Upright/Downright Productions.

While her style obviously is deeply rooted in gospel, and jazz music, she invests it with a high level of artistry that enables her to transcend all labels.

Her individuality comes through in everything she sings, from Top 40 favorites and jazz standards to beautiful songs such as "Home" from "The Wiz."

Her keyboard talents are more than adequate, but it is her wonderful way with lyrics that makes her an exceptional performer. She has a pleasant, flexible voice and delivers words with clarity and honest conviction, virtues not always found these days in the pop realm.

She was backed by a strong trio comprising bassist Joe Wiley, guitarist Wayne Henry and percussionist Bill

Allums, Jr., whose father, Upright/Downright Productions head Bill Allums, Sr., spelled Nina at the keyboard for her up-tempo romp through the classic Billie Holiday blues piece, "Fine and Mellow."

Henry's fine solo work on guitar, at times evocative of the late, great Wes Montgomery, was deservedly and rewardingly spotlighted throughout the show.

There is obviously much more to Causey than she had time to show, this being a mere "sampler" of her versatility. Judging from the consistent excellence of her performance, however, she appears to have the resources for a long and successful career, given the public attention she deserves.

Causey and friends more than redeemed a show that was given a shaky start by comedians Warren Thomas and John Ross.

Both Thomas' and Ross' efforts were marred by their conspicuous lack of style and a surfeit of pointless street language.

The fact that each showed occasional flashes of sharp comedic insight made their foraging in the gutter for laughs all the more depressing.

With style, a comedian can adjust to an audience. Without it, he dies. As these two did.

Keeping the Circle a special place

We would like to respond to a letter that appeared in your paper from Ms. Gerry Barbachano regarding the development of the Colusa Circle in Kensington.

The Colusa-Arlington Neighborhood Association (previously the Citizens for the Betterment of Kensington) is a group of citizens who seek to preserve the special, quiet, old-fashioned atmosphere that this part of the Bay Area has enjoyed up to now.

We are not anti-development. We, too, want a more vibrant Circle. The type of development we would like to see is reasonable:

- Buildings of one or two stories in order to preserve open, pleasant feeling on the Circle.
- Stores and shops that serve the neighborhood — as endorsed by the County General Plan.
- Adequate parking facilities to keep neighborhood congestion to a minimum. Many of the streets in the area are so narrow that parking is allowed on only one side. There is barely enough residential parking, and certainly enough to accommodate overflow from a commercial development which doesn't provide its own parking.
- A development that will not channel traffic from the residential areas into the narrow streets in the residential areas.

Our opposition to the current plan is based on conditions that any homeowner or resident can understand:

- First, the development is too large and too dense. Colusa Circle area is a quiet neighborhood that houses many senior citizens and families with young children. The County General Plan mandates that its small business district (currently 10 to 12 shops) be made up of retail shops to serve the neighborhood. Into this area, the developer, Edward Hammonds, proposes to inject 25 additional shops and offices as well as a 120-set restaurant — bar — showroom, all on a site of less than an acre.
- Clearly, with all these new shops and offices, the proposed development is more in line with a regional shopping center. With regional shopping areas like the El Cerrito Plaza and the Solano business district only a 10 minute walk away, we fail to see how such an over-development benefits the area except the developer.
- Second, provisions for parking are totally inadequate. The County has developed ordinances to determine the amount of off-street parking any development must provide in order to minimize traffic, noise and congestion in surrounding neighborhood. Under these long-established ordinances, Mr. Hammonds should provide nearly 30 off-street parking places. His current plan provides only 39. Congestion, confusion and danger will result as automobiles are forced into the quiet, narrow residential streets that surround the Circle. Normal through traffic on its way to other locations will also be affected by the congestion.

• Third, we are concerned that the precedent set on the Colusa Circle will allow the same kind of over-development in the Arlington-Amherst area of Kensington. Both areas are twins under the county's development plan. Allowing exceptions in the zoning laws in one area will certainly result in pressure to allow exceptions in the other.

Members of our organization have talked with Mr. Hammonds several times during the past six months, but Mr. Hammonds refuses to address seriously any of our concerns about parking or the density of his development.

The Board of Supervisors has unfairly overridden its own pre-existing guidelines in permitting Mr. Hammonds to provide less than adequate parking and in allowing him in effect to create a regional shopping area in a part of Kensington that has been mandated for neighborhood businesses only. This is why we have brought the matter to court through a suit filed against the Board of Supervisors.

Finally, we are not a small group of rabble rousers as Ms. Barbachano implies. Nearly 900 citizens signed our petition last May to protest the scale of the proposed Colusa Circle development. Our support is broad-based and comes from home-owners and residents in all parts of Kensington, as well as the adjoining areas of Albany, El Cerrito, and Berkeley.

Bill Johnston, president, and Oliver Miller, secretary, for the Colusa - Arlington Neighborhood Association, Inc.

In support of the 'peace package'

A peculiar contrast appears. On the one hand the President proposes shy missile research; preparations are underway to develop a capability for biological warfare; the most powerful countries of the world are searching ever more deeply for weapons that could destroy life on earth.

On the other hand a "Peace Package" waits to be considered by the Legislature. Authored by Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, this set of seven Assembly Joint Resolutions (AJR) calls upon the President and Congress to "invest our heads and our hearts, our talents and our dollars in positively developing the science and art of peace and survival" (AJR 73). Further it urges support of a plan for student exchanges between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. (AJR 75), and for a mutual exchange of Soldiers for Peace, a citizens' exchange, to break down barriers of mistrust and develop mutual understanding of the potential for a more peaceful coexistence (AJR 72).

It asks the President and Congress to establish, with the U.S.S.R. a Joint Crisis Management Center to identify the root causes of war, develop methods of reducing the risk of war, develop accurate detection devices for nuclear detonation, establish standard operating procedures, standard messages, and specific procedures to be used in a crisis, and to Get ready to swing through the trees

The Alameda County 4-H organization offers area youngsters an "adventure ropes" class, and a group from the Albany YMCA day camp travelled to Chabot Park this summer to try their hands at swinging from the trees.

The course consists of ropes, cables, platforms and logs arranged in a series of primarily physical tasks or obstacles called events. Geared to become increasingly difficult, both physically and psychologically, the course requires both personal commitment and decision-making ability.

Individuals and the group proceed through the low events and eventually up to the high events. These events are designed to be done in pairs, as a group and by individuals in an atmosphere of support.

The idea for the adventure ropes course evolved out of efforts to blend certain aspects of traditional military confidence courses, Peace Corps leadership training techniques and Outward Bound with the ongoing curriculum of the public high school.

About 300 people, mostly young, have gone through the program in the past two years.

Youth assistant Brian Dadiw, who teaches the class, said that urban young people enjoy the opportunity for a physical challenge: they need a "sense of adventure (which may or may not include an element of danger). These aspects were once a part of everyday life in our culture and still are in some cultures," he said.

Dadiw said the course encourages both verbal and non-verbal communication, and that students learn to commit themselves and trust each other.

"There are no failures at the ropes course. The only failures are those who do not try. Even for those people we encourage them to think through what it was that stopped them and kept them from doing their best," he said.

Wendy Pike untwists the belay rope.

Get ready for fall term

By BARBARA ERICKSON

The staggered start is a thing of the past for Richmond Unified secondary students, thanks to the return of the subject day in junior highs.

Last year, when only freshmen and sophomores had subject days, school days began anytime from 8:10 to 10:30 a.m., depending on the grade level and school.

This year, although juniors and seniors will still be on a subject day, all secondary students will begin school at the same time.

The school board cut the sixth subject from most of the secondary school grades last year to help offset a $5 million deficit. This year, with an additional $4 million in state aid, the board restored the sixth subject to the junior high level.

Spokesman David Taylor said many students and parents complained last year about staggered starting times.

Early start, he said, will allow some students to get to Contra Costa College and UC-Berkeley and work at part-time jobs.

Write your own journal

Course in journal writing that explores concepts in science and technology is being offered by Vista College beginning Wednesday, Sept. 14.

Registration will be held from 9:30-11:30 a.m. in the Hall at Mary Magdalene Church, 2005 Berkeley, Section 2.

Hearing

set on textbooks

By BARBARA ERICKSON

Science textbooks considered for use in public schools are on display through Sept. 14 in the County Office of Education.

The public is invited to examine the materials from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Instructional Materials Center, 2371 Powell Dr.

Thursday, Sept. 15, the State Board of Education will hold a public hearing to consider adoption of the materials.

The hearing will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Room 166, Capitol Mall, Sacramento.

Anyone who wants to appear before the board should send a written request to Ellis Bowman, administrative assistant to the board, 721 Capitol Mall, Sacramento, Calif. 95814, no later than Sept. 12.

The state board approves a list of materials for use in the department of education.

Books have to choose from this list when using instructional materials to buy texts.

For more information, call 480-7372.

Singers

summoned

Donald Aird, director of Berkeley Chamber Singers, has announced auditions in all voice parts for the coming season.

The 18-voice ensemble will be enlarged to 24 for this season for performances of a Bach cantata and a Haydn Mass with a chamber orchestra. Other composers include Byrd, Lassus, Debussy, Copland and West Coast premiere major British composers are scheduled.

Interested singers are urged to arrange for audition (some sight-singing skills are required) by calling 524-8955.

Pvt. Davis

is trained

Army Reserve Pvt. F. Davis, son of Judy Davis, of El Cerrito, has received basic training at Fort Knox, Ky.

During the training, students received instruction in drill and ceremonies, map reading, military courtesy, justice, first aid, and army history and training.

There were "numerous requests" for a set beginning time, he said.

Junior high schedules for regular days will run from 8:30 a.m. to 2:35 p.m. at all except Pinole Junior, which lets out at 2:39 p.m. Minimum days will begin at 8:30 a.m. and end at 1:30 a.m., with Pinole Junior letting out at 1:34 p.m.

The ending time in regular day senior high schedules will be: De Anza 2:50 p.m. for 9th and 10th grades, 1:55 p.m. for 11th and 12th; El Cerrito 2:45 and 1:50 p.m.; Ellis 3 and 2:05 p.m.; Kennedy 2:50 and 1:55 p.m.; Pinole Valley 2:55 and 2 p.m.; Richmond 2:49 and 1:57 p.m.

The ending time for senior high minimum days is: De Anza 1:40 p.m. for 9th and 10th grade, 12:55 p.m. for 11th and 12th; El Cerrito 1:40 and 12:55 p.m.; Ellis 1:55 and 1:10 p.m.; Kennedy 1:40 and 12:55 p.m.; Pinole Valley 1:30 and 12:45 p.m.; and Richmond 1:40 and 12:55 p.m.

School opens Wednesday, Sept. 7 with a minimum day.

Taylor said all new junior and senior high students should register now to complete their class schedules.

PTA plans day care

The Woodrow Wilson PTA Task Force is sponsoring an after-school enrichment program in an effort to fight the impact of recent cutbacks in education.

Classes will begin the week of Sept. 12 and will include ceramics, tumbling, music, science, Spanish and computers with hands-on training on the school's Apple/Pet computers.

Afternoon child care, provided by the YMCA Latch Key Club, will be available for those parents who require it. For further information about the class schedule and fees, phone 247-9077, 222-2755 or 237-7420.

Sennin Do classes set

EL CERRITO — The Sennin Organization, in conjunction with the El Cerrito Community Center, is offering classes in Sennin-Do, a Japanese-based course for development of mind and body.

Instruction includes meditation, stretching exercises, breathing methods, and healing arts.

The first class session begins from noon to 1:30 p.m. Sept. 15, and continues through Oct. 20.

For registration information and class fees, contact Lois Boyle at the Community Center, 525-6748.

There is a free lunch

ALBANY — Albany Unified School District will serve hot lunches, bag lunches and milk at the five school sites when school opens on Wednesday, Sept. 7, and throughout the school year.

Families with limited incomes are entitled to apply for free or reduced price lunches.

The applications and eligibility scales are available at the school sites throughout the school year.

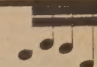

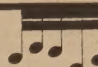

Merritt sets CPR classes

Oakland's Samuel Merritt Hospital is offering community classes in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR). These classes prepare participants to give immediate help to victims of a heart attack or those whose natural breathing has stopped.

Classes will be offered from October through December. Each course consists of three, two-hour sessions on consecutive Wednesday evenings beginning at 7 p.m. in Merritt Hospital's dining room annexes.

After six hours of instruction and practice in the technique, participants receive a certification in basic life-support from the American Heart Association.

The fee for the course is $15 for the general public and $10 for students and senior citizens. Preregistration and prepayment are required. For information and class reservation, contact Merritt Hospital's staff development office at 420-6018.

Dear Mom & Dad,

Sorry we haven't written... but we have exciting news... we bought a new home. Mom, you'd just love it — Benicia's so quaint — crisp air, small town atmosphere, antique shops — reminds me of Carmel. Tom's excited about the new marina that's being built. Our home is at Southampton, a picturesque community now in its 12th year. The builder has a tremendous reputation — both for building a quality home & for great follow-up service. Our home is a dream... tiled entry, large spacious kitchen, greenhouse window, large yard. The price & the financing were great on our 2655 sq. ft. home. Plus (you'll like this, dad), Southampton's are the first Computer-Ready homes in America. They're big energy-savers, too. Our neighbor's last B&E bill was only $49 — for a 1900 sq. ft.!

Why men are not men anymore

By KAREN MATTHEWS

Both men and women in this country have changed during the past 15 years or so, no doubt about that.

It is the contention of three psychologists who are starting a series of men's therapy groups in Berkeley that some men may have changed too much.

Tony D'Aguanno, Chick Drollette and Michael Blyth, who work together at a mental health clinic in Pittsburg, will begin conducting their first "male empowerment group" Monday.

Since when do men need empowerment?

The three psychologists say they have many male patients who have been so profoundly influenced by feminism — who have devoted so many years to "getting in touch with their feminine sides" — that they have forgotten how to be men.

The problem is especially severe, the three say, in the disarmament movement, where feminism is so influential that men in that milieu have become a race of Caspar Milquetoasts.

What does one do in a male empowerment group?

"We intend to set them tasks," says Blyth, a curly-haired, bearded Englishman who has lived seven years in the United States.

There will be readings, and the men will be assigned to work on specific problems in their lives.

Eventually, says Blyth, "we're going to take them into the wilderness on a vision quest."

Silence to rituals practiced by several American Indian tribes, these vision quests will involve fasting, sweat lodges, and spending one or more nights alone on a mountain.

Blyth and Concord native Drollette have experience leading vision quests.

D'Aguanno, who is from Queens, New York, says so far his experience has been "more urban." Although the three psychologists planning the new group are all the same age — 36 — they are different in many other ways as well.

They disagree, for instance, on the John Wayne question.

Blyth and D'Aguanno frequently refer to the late screen star in a disparaging manner, saying things like "we're not trying to turn these guys into John Waynes."

But Drollette says he is a fan of Wayne's "and proud of it." Someday, Drollette says, he is going to write an article setting the record straight about the Duke.

D'Aguanno says he prefers fellow Italian-American Robert DeNiro as a matinee idol, while Blyth points out that the late David Niven "really went to war and got decorated, and didn't just act the hero on the screen."

Blyth, a modern-day Renaissance man, has some experience as a performer himself. In addition to his work as a therapist he is an actor, singer, and musician.

His most recent performance, Blyth recalls, was in a play called "Old Man Coyote Has Always Existed" at the July 4 celebration in Sausalito. He played God.

The three now counsel clients at the East (Contra Costa) County Activities Center in Pittsburg. Three months ago, they say, they got the idea of co-directing this new kind of men's group.

They became aware of the problem of men who have been too influenced by feminism both through their clientele and through D'Aguanno's and Blyth's involvement in the peace movement.

D'Aguanno says he has been a member of Psychotherapists for Social Responsibility, and anti-nuclear weapons group, for about a year and a half. Blyth is not a member of a group but considers himself to be within the peace and disarmament movement, broadly speaking.

"When I was in the peace movement I noticed that a lot of the men didn't seem to be forceful enough," remarks D'Aguanno. "If a dispute came up between a man and a woman it wasn't that the woman always won, but a kind of power was missing."

In personal relations, as well, women are saying they need male energy "to push up against," the three claim.

Although the syndrome the three therapists have named is a response to feminism they say their analysis is definitely not anti-feminist.

They say they are in favor of feminism, and they are glad some men have learned how to be sensitive and understanding, "but some folks are leaning over backwards."

It's a question of balance, all three say. Men and women both have feminine energy and masculine energy, or, to use Eastern terms, yin and yang.

"Many of the clients we see in Pittsburg are too yin, too introspective," claims Blyth.

The trio say that the feminist movement has given women validation to seek the correct balance of these two kinds of energy, and now men need that validation too.

The first "male empowerment group" will meet Monday nights in Berkeley. Participants will be charged on a sliding scale.

When all 12 slots are filled the psychologists will start a waiting list for the second group.

The three chose Berkeley for their first group because it "feels like a good place," says D'Aguanno.

They believe many of the feminist-influenced men they seek to help live here, they say, along with San Francisco and Marin.

Birthday party set for baptist church

ALBANY — Albany's 75th anniversary celebration will be held in September, and Albany First Baptist is celebrating its 75th anniversary as a church on Sunday, Sept. 11.

Many old-time members and friends of the church have been invited to attend the celebration.

Pastor Alan Newlove is looking forward to meeting the old-time members. Pictures of the church family have been taken which will be incorporated into a large album as a remembrance of this occasion. There will be a luncheon in addition to the ceremony.

The church began Sept. 6, 1908 in the home of L. S. Hiney. Folding canvas benches about six feet long were used. The erection of the first building began on Nov. 7, at the corner of Stannage & Brighton. Pastor Robert Whitaker chose the name Chapel Immanuel, but it was called the Albany Baptist Church.

The second chapel was located at Portland Avenue and Key Route. The first parsonage was purchased in May, 1939, at 638 Pomona. The final services in the building at Portland and Key Route were held on Sunday, Sept. 1, 1946.

A ground-breaking service for the construction of the new church was held on Sunday, Sept. 28, 1947. The church is the only church on Solano Avenue, and is the second oldest church in Albany.

In commemoration of Albany's 75th anniversary, the church is having a women's tea Friday afternoon, Sept. 23, from 1 to 3:30 p.m. The church will also be displaying artifacts and historical photos.

Veterans: keeping those benefits coming

For veterans who plan to enroll in or return to school this fall under the GI Bill, the Veterans Administration has a check list to help keep VA education benefits coming regularly.

- Double check your courses to be certain they count toward your educational objective.

- Register early. The VA and your school need time to process your registration so GI Bill checks can be delivered promptly.

- File for GI Bill benefits as early as possible.

- Avoid dropping classes after registration.

- If you have to interrupt your education, notify the VA promptly. Tell the VA when you expect to return to classes.

- If you reduce your course load, also notify the VA promptly to avoid an overpayment of your benefits.

- If you change address, notify the VA promptly. Also notify the school and the post office.

- Submit transcripts to the college admissions and records office immediately after application is made.

Eligible veterans have 10 years from their date of last discharge (but not later than Dec. 31, 1989) to take advantage of programs available through the GI Bill. These programs include apprenticeship or on-the-job training, tutorial assistance and a work-study program under which veterans enrolled as full-time students may perform services and receive an additional allowance.

Students with no dependents enrolled in school full time receive $342 per month; veterans with one dependent receive $407 monthly, and veterans with two dependents receive $464. An additional monthly amount is provided for each dependent in excess of two.

For information about the GI Bill call the San Francisco VA Regional Office toll-free at 800-652-1240.

Expanding program for YMCA kid's club

The Kids' Club before and after school program is expanding in Berkeley and Albany. Sponsored by the Berkeley-Albany YMCA, "Kids' Club" is a program for kindergarten-fifth graders.

The program will be at the Albany YMCA and Marin School, as well as in Berkeley.

Supervised transportation to and from Vista, Cornell, Whittier, School of the Madeleine, and St. Joseph's school is available. An adult counselor meets the children after school and escorts them to the appropriate site.

At the site, children participate in creative arts, field trips, sports and games, science activities, food projects and homework time. Swimming instruction once a week is included.

The staff members are college graduates and students with interests in children's social, emotional and physical development. Monthly staff training sessions are held on child development, leadership and child-related research.

Full-day programs are planned for most school holidays.

Children may enroll for one through five days a week. For more information on fees and registration call 525-1130 during office hours.
